Dear Parents and Carers,

It is with regret that, after the announcement from Boris Johnson this evening, we have to revise our intention to open school fully for all our pupils this week and for the foreseeable future.

We will, of course, be open for Critical Worker children (those parents working on the front line in response to Covid) and vulnerable students. The criteria for these categories can be found in the link below to see if you are eligible to request a space.

Please let the office know by 3.00pm tomorrow (Tuesday 5th) if you will require this provision for your child.

In addition, in order to minimise the impact of the pandemic on their learning and to support our parents with home learning, teachers will be providing daily lessons for our children who have to stay at home.

Obviously, we are so disappointed not to have all our children back in school and working together this week but, with the worrying picture nationally, it is obvious that the safety of our community must remain paramount at this time.

Free school meals for those eligible will be available once we have had further guidance on how to provide them.

I would like to thank my staff who have been determined to do their utmost to maintain provision for our children.

As the situation changes I will, of course, communicate quickly and clearly in order to pass on information for you to organise family arrangements as soon as possible.

As always, thank you for your continued support.

Kind regards,

Jonathan Hart
